Upon page 1 is a bit of rhyme, which has the swing of Kipling. It is based upon the picking up unaccountably of a day in the equatorial zone and it is intended obviously as a satire on the board of survey. Following are a few choice stanzas. choico stanzas:

"Two days there shall be instead of one: Two days while at sea On the homeward run," Said the eminent board of survey.

"All drinking shall stop
And gambling cease,
And we'll have a hop
On the day of peace."
Said the wise-acre board of survey.

"Old Neptune must work
Without more pay:
And he shall not shirk
On this great day,"
Said the confident board of survey.

The night had passed and day had come, The ocean was smooth and calm, When off the lee as we watched the sea Rose an island covered with palm.

And it moved it seemed toward our state-ly ship And it stopped us on our way. And a horrible, harsh and guttural voice Commanded us, "Account for the day."

You make me work two days when one is all the calendar shows;
You'll order the course, and bid the fates. To stay their well-earned blows.
"You mortale, Ha! Ha! How amusing you are!"
And Neptune gave a great laugh,
"The board of survey, he he, ho, ho, You're like a great big calf."

Sleep came to us then and with it a dream, Or, rather, a nightmare of dread. And terrible, tongueless, tantalized forms Who laughed when we wished we were dead.

Our further misfortune is full of strange tales.
Which here I've not space to tell.
Suffice it to say, "Leave old Neptune alone.

Few were the habitues of Starboard alley who, shortly before dressing gong last evening realized that behind the folds of the heavy oriental tapestries, which screens the interior of the Blue Goose from public view, there was being enacted a tragedy unique in the annais of criminal history. The first intimation of disturbance was a gasping sound which reached the cars of Patrolman Green and prompted him to listen at the doot.

Green's report at the Bridge avenue police station tells of the ensuing scuffle, the rustic of feet, the sharp command of the leader: "Now use this on him." The order was followed by a sharp reportion all was still. Patrolman Green waited no longer. He rusted to the nearest alarm box to call two special police from the Central station. When reinforcements arrived admission was demanded. A the Central station. When reinforcements arrived admission was demanded. A liquid voice responded, followed by the opening of the door. MONEY TO FIGHT FOOD TRUST TO BE RETURNED

Real Estate Association Disgusted With Non-Action of the Grand Jury.

The culmination of the fight which the citizens of Salt Lake have been making against the abnormally high prices of food products in this city was reached Saturday when the Real Estate association decided to return to the subscribers the money that had been given for assisting in carrying on campaign. Attention is called to the fact that as the grand jury recently empaneled for the purpose of investi-gating the "food trust" had found no indictments and would find none, the association felt that the community was not in sympathy with such a movement and that therefore the association could have nothing to do with the matter.

A general letter is also issued to the public asking that the unknown con-tributors of two sums of money call at the office of the association and receive their subscriptions back.

At a meeting of the association held at the Commercial club last Wednesday a leter regarding the action of the grand jury was read from a citizen, and although received by the members present with no comment whatever, was nevertheless made a part of the official records of the association. It seems to be the general feeling among the members of the association that they to be the general feeling among the members of the association that they have not been supported in the action which they started for the lowering of the high prices in the city and that the finding of the grand jury is a farce. In an address which the association issued to the public under date of September 26, before the investigation was started, attention was called to the fact that the association was merely offering itself as a leader in the movement to reduce the high prices in the city and at the present time the association feels that if the people, as is shown by the verdict of the grand jury, are satisfied with the present conditions, the association can conscientiously do nothing further in the matter. The letter follows:

'In view of the fact that the disposition of the public to support the Salt Lake Real Estate association in its effort to secure a reduction of the LEVI N. HARMON, merchant of Price, is in the city on business. When seen at the Wilson, Friday evening, he said that business was in pretty fair shape in Carbon county, although not so good as a couple of months ago. Work out the Utak Irrigation and Power company's canal has been stopped temporarily, and this has had a depressing effect. "But," said Mr. Harmon, "construction work, as I am informed, will be renewed next month, perhaps, as it is the determination of the company to complete the canal as soon as possible. It is a magnificent project and will, when completed, bring about 30,000 acres of the finest and in the State under trigation.

"Just now money is scarce for the reason that a great deal of grain and live stock remains unsold, and the money with which to purchase is not to be had. No one in business circles has been pushed to the wall as yet, and all are hoping for better times in the near future. I think, however, that no great industrial enterprise will be started the ensuing year, but rather that the work will be confined to complation of projects already inaugurated."

EMIL WILSON, superintendent of the old Emma mine at Alta, came down from eamp Friday night and registered at the Wilson. When he left camp in the afternoon the snow was falling heavily. The snow is now four and a half feet deep on the level. This, he says, will stop ore hauling for a while. The Emma has had a force of twenty-four men at work all summer, and has kept their teams hauling high-grade ore all the season to the Ploneer sampler at Sandy. The mine, Mr. Wilson says, is looking better than at any time since the ore veln was lost twenty-eight years ago. The mine is now being worked along scientific lines, and upraises are being made from the Bay City tunnel to tap the main ore vein at a depth of 690 feet.
